TOO OFTEN THE CASE INTERESTING PROOFS.

A young society lady, after a round of gayety, becomes suddenly conscious of an enural sensation. She has frequent attacks of diminess, her back aches, and she feels blue and distinces, her back aches, and she feels blue and enerally run down.

Mothers, look well to your daughters!
Daughters, look well to yourselves!
Let the first symptom denoting the approach of disease receive your instant attention. Healthy women are the hope of the race, and it is well-high criminal to neglect anything which promises relief.

There is hope for all sufferers from Nervous Discuss. Read what follows:
Mrs. Jennic C. Davis, a fine artist and an accomplished authoress, of Westfield, Wis, had been subject to headache ever since she could remember. So severe were her at-could remember. So severe were her at-tacks as to cause at times temporary delirium. All treatment had failed to relieve her, but All treatment has falled to relieve her, but niter using Dr. Miles' Restorative Norvine she writes: "My record is to me, at least, satisfactory. No headsche, constantly increasing appetite, and a consequent gain in weight of two and a half pounds in just one week."

Six weeks later she writes: "Have read and sewed immoderately of late, but my headaches do not return."

Mrs. John R. Miller, of Valparaiso, Ind., was attacked three years ago with turn of life in its worst form. It finally went to her head, and all indications were that it would head, and all indications were that it would result either in insanity or softening of the brain. Her husband thus writes: "It would be impossible for me to attempt a description of her sufferings during all this time. She was treated by our very best local physicians, with but temporary benefit. She has taken four hottles of Dr. MILES' RESTORATIVE REVINE, and is cured. She has gained twenty pounds in weight. I tell you, she often blesses you for what you have done for her." Recollect that for the CURE of all Ner-

BUSINESS SITUATION

The Trend of Trade Points to a Marked Improvement.

BANKS ARE RECOVERING

Their Normal Condition, and the Only Thing that Stands in the Way of Restored Confidence is the Needless Delay of the Senate in Confirming the Action of the House on the Silver Question.

New York, Sept. 16.—Henry Clews & Co.'s financial circular says: During the past week, there has been a continuation of the improvement in Wal street interests, and a marked recovery in the tone and amount of business at large in all parts of the country. The restoration of the banks to something approaching a normal condition has contributed much towards this improve ment; inasmuch as it has removed the money blockade, restored confidence in credits, renewed discounting and pre-pared the way to a general return of case and low rates in money. The act-ion of the house of representatives on silver has made a still more important contribution towards the recovery of confidence; for it has given a strong assurance of the remedy of the evil from which all the derangements—monetary, financial and commercial,—have primarily arisen.

Unfortunately, the recovery is obstructed by the needless delay of the senate in confirming the action of the house on silver repeal. For the ordinary purposes of trade, the strong assurances coming from the house and the probability of the senate ultimately giving a like majority may be accepted as a sufficient guarantee of a moderate business; for trade obligations do not business; for trade obligations do not usually extend over a period longer than a few weeks or months. But with the larger operations of capital it is a different case. When outlays for large products have to be provided for, those who are to advance the capital need to be assured that nothing will interfere to prevent the due payment of their loans; and when doubt exists as to the kind of money in which liquidation kind of money in which liquidation may be ultimately made, the capitalist refuses to lend until that radical doubt is removed. It thus comes to pass that the tactics of delay so resolutely per-sisted in by the senate are inflicting upon the larger operations of finance and upon new undertakings of industry as complete a paralysis as has existed at any time since the depression set in. Equally is it holding in restraint the disposition of foreign capital to seek employment in this country, providing our money of account is made satisfac-tory. However much, therefore, business interests may owe to the prompt action of the house on the silver ques-tion, it owes is to the reckless trifling of the senate that the recovery of confidence and of commercial activity is still very far from being complete and that vast amounts of capital are held stag-nant or but momentarily employed. Another serious effect of the obstruc-tive attitude of the minority of the senate is that it is holding in suspense other measures in which the country is urgently interested. The action of Cones on the large prospective deficiency gress on the large prospective deticiency of revenue, npon the impending tariff legislation, and upon measures necessary to provide a better elasticity in our currency system, is delayed to the detriment of business interests universally. While the country insists upon being finally exempted from the dangers connected with a depreciated silver currency, yet it does not overlook the fact that, when that source of currency supply is cut off, it is necessary that some other means of sustaining the volome of the circulating must be supplied; and, in view of our late experience of the effects of a currency famine, the people are not willing that such provision shall be postponed any longer than is really necessary. To deal er than is really necessary. To deal with that measure, however, before the silver problem is disposed of would be but to put in the hands of the silver minority the means of deferring legisla-tion on silver purchases and of throw-ing the whole currency question into confusion. It may not be necessary to andertake at present any broad scheme of currency reform; but whatever has to be done must wait until the senate to be done must wait until the senate has voted on silver.

It is true that, when confidence has been restored and the whole circulation has thereby been brought again into free activity, we shall find the supply of money equal to immediate requirements, and the more so as the new tariff policy will establish, from this time forward, a lower range of prices, which will proportionately reduce the which will proportionately reduce the amount of currency needed. But, not-withstanding that fact, it is to the last degree undesirable that our ever-ex-panding trade should be left to operate under a consciousness that there exists no legal provision for an increase in the amount of currency; and there are large sections of the country that would become restive under such a condition of things. It is not therefore to be ex-pected that Congress will let the situa-tion stand just where the suspension of silver purchases leaves it. Just what Congress may choose to do in the circumstances does not yet appear. In some quarters there are plain indications of a disposition to initiate large measures of reconstruction.

While that may become a positive necessity at some not distant period, yet a much more limited treatment would author for immediate requirements. the national banks were allowed to issue notes up to the full face value of their bonds, that would bring out new issues of national bank notes which issues of national bank notes which would more than satisfy immediate wants; and the country would have an interval for considering what should be the nature of future arrangements—a question upon which there has so far been very little intelligent discussion. Considering the many and serious questions that await the attention of Congress, it seems that this one might well be dismissed with this partial and transfent treatment.

Wool,

Bradsree's

The past week has shown increased activity in the wool market. Several large manufacturers have bought very freely at the low prices now ruling. One manufacturer added 1,000,000 pounds of territory to the 2,000,000 pounds he bought last week, and several others have taken large lots. This is thought to be only a flurry, however, as the mills are not starting up, and the production continues limited. Most of the business has been done in territory wools. Prices still favor the buyer, with dealers offering freely at present rates. Fleece wools are dull but steady on the basis of 24c for XX and above. Ohio No. 1 fleeces and delains fleeces are dull and nominal. There is nothing doing in Australlian wools, and importers are seading them has to London as they cannot nal. There is nothing doing in Austra-lian wools, and importers are sending them back to Londou, as they cannot be sold in competition with domestic fleeces except at a greatloss.

WASHINGTON'S GRANDNIECE

A West Virginian-She Visits the World's -An Interesting Talk

One of the most interested and interesting visitors to the World's Fair during the past week who signed their names in the register at the Virginia building is Mrs. John Wheeler Smith, widow of the late Major Smith, U. S. A.

widow of the late Major Smith, U. S. A.

Mrs. Smith is the oldest living relative of George Washington. She is a daughter of the late John Thornton Washington, of Cedar Lawn, Jossesson county, West Virginia. Her father was a great-grandson of Colonel Samuel Washington, oldest brother of the father of this country. Mrs. Smith, whose maiden name was Georgia Anna
Washington, was born at Cedar Lawn March, 1821, and is the oldest of three surviving members of a family of ten children. In 1841 she married Major John Wheeler Smith, a paymaster in children. In 1841 she married Major John Wheeler Smith, a paymaster in the United States army, who after going through the war resigned and settled at Little Rock, Ark., soon after the war was over, and there Mrs. Smith has since made her home. Speaking of her impressions of Chi-cago and the fair she said: "It all seems so new and strange and wonderful that sometimes it seems almost like a dream

so new and strange and wonderful that semetimes it seems almost like a dream to me. Aside from the many wonderful things I have seen in Chicago and at the fair grounds, that of course which had the greatest interest for me was the meeting with my children and grand-children and my visits to the old Mount Vernon home, which is reproduced after a fashion on the grounds. This visit, however, was not altogether untinged with sad reflections. There was just enough reality about it to suggest the many great changes which have taken place in my native state and in our own family. The house did not seem anything like, the spacious old frame mansion at Mount Vernon had seemed to me in my younger days. Some of the furniture looked natural, and I could not resist the temptation to sit down in the old arm chair which had been used by my illustrious relative. But this act my illustrious relative. But this act came near costing me very dearly. I did not for the moment realize that I was doing something against the rules, and something which was likely to prove very serious as well. Almost in a moment I found myself the object of a moment I found myself the object of curiosity seekers who pressed around to find out what it was all about. I found myself in a position which was very disagreeable and embarrassing. I very soon realized that I was not at Mount Vernon in reality, and I suppose if I had not beaten a hasty retreat I would have been divested of everything which would have furnished a souvenir for a curiosity seeker, even to the exfor a curiosity seeker, even to the ex-tent of losing my white hair, as I un-derstand these vandals spare nothing in their eager desire to gather memen-

Mrs. Smith has not visited Virginia Mrs. Smith has not visited virginia since she left there just before the beginning of the war. "I do not care to go back," she said. "I am not much given to sentamentalism, but I prefer to think of Virginia and the old home blaces of our family as I knew them when I was a girl. From what my friends who have seen it tell me I think it and the back who have seen it tell me I think friends who have seen it tell me I think it would only make me inexpressibly sad to see the changes which have taken place. So many of my relatives and schoolmates have passed away—our old home even is in a state which has been cut off the old state of which I feel so proud—that altogether I prefer to think of Virginia as I knew it years ago."
